SUMMARY REPORT ON THE DECEMBER 2010 GROUNDWATER SAMPLING EVENT AT THE INDUSTRIAL EXCESS LANDFILL (IEL) SITE, UNIONTOWN, OHIO

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

On behalf of Bridgestone Americas Tire Operations, LLC (BATO), Los Alamos Technical Associates, Inc. (LATA) is pleased to present this report on the groundwater sampling event conducted at the Industrial Excess Landfill (IEL) Site (Site) during December 2010 in accordance with the approved Remedial Design Plan for the Industrial Excess Landfill (IEL) Site, September 22, 2003 (Sharp, 2003), Sampling and Analysis Plan (Sharp, 2000) and Quality Assurance Project Plan (PRC, 1991). This summary report describes the data and discusses the results of the analyses of samples from 22 wells in the IEL network.

LATA collected groundwater samples, depth-to-water measurements, and prepared samples for transport to the laboratory. All twenty two samples were collected using passive sampling techniques. Well MW-24i was unable to be sampled during the December sampling event; the well could not be located as it was buried under a new road. Well MW-22i was sampled but the sample froze overnight and the vial cracked which released the sample, so no sample was analyzed. Samples were submitted to Test America Laboratories, Inc. in North Canton, Ohio for volatile organic compound (VOC) analysis.

The results of this sampling event are similar to the results of all of the events conducted since August 2000, as follows:

- Groundwater conditions in the vicinity of the site continue to improve.
- Groundwater continues to move from east to west beneath the site, consistent with past measurements.
- VOC concentrations are present in groundwater near or below their respective United States Environmental Protection Agency (U.S. EPA) Drinking Water Standard Maximum Contaminant Levels (MCLs). Only one on-site well contains three constituents (1,2-dichloroethane, cis-1,2-dichloroethene and vinyl chloride) above their MCLs.
- Ten wells contained detectable concentrations of VOCs.
- Groundwater concentrations are within or below historic ranges for the site.
- The number of organic compounds detected has decreased from 81 to 7.
- Most of the organic constituents detected in groundwater are daughter products of the degradation of chlorinated solvents. The presence of these constituents provides direct evidence that the reductive dechlorination natural attenuation processes are continuing and are effective in reducing contaminant concentrations at the site.

The in-place monitoring program is designed to ensure that trends in concentrations in site perimeter wells are identified and monitored. This report demonstrates that overall groundwater conditions continue to improve in the vicinity of the site.

This report is organized into the following sections: Introduction, Background, Scope of Work, Data and Results, Discussion, and References.

1.0 INTRODUCTION

This report summarizes the results of the groundwater sampling event conducted by LATA, on behalf of BATO at the IEL Site during December 2010. During this sampling event, LATA collected depth-to-groundwater data, obtained groundwater samples, and prepared samples for transport to Test America Laboratories, Inc. (Test America) located in North Canton, Ohio. Samples were analyzed for volatile organic compounds (VOCs) by EPA Method SW-846 8260B.

Table 1 describes the plan for this sampling event as part of the 30-year sampling plan presented in the approved Remedial Design Plan (RDP) (see Table 10 of the RDP). Table 2 presents a summary of this sampling event. Table 2 is adapted from Table 9 of the RDP that lists all of the monitoring wells in the post-2003 monitoring well network. During the December 2010 sampling event, twenty-three of the twenty-four monitoring wells were sampled but only twenty two were analyzed for VOCs. Well MW-24i could not be located since it was covered by a new road. Well MW-22i was sampled but the sample froze overnight and the vial cracked which released the sample, so no sample was analyzed.

2.0 BACKGROUND

2.1 Site Description

The IEL Site is located in a rural residential area in Lake Township, Stark County, Ohio approximately 10 miles southeast of Akron. Figure 1 presents the location of Uniontown, Ohio. The site includes an approximate 29-acre former landfill located approximately 0.4 miles south of the intersection of Cleveland Avenue and State Route 619 at 12646 Cleveland Avenue, NW (see Figure 2). The landfill was closed under Ohio law pursuant to a court order in 1980. U.S. EPA purchased several adjoining properties such that the total site area measures approximately 47 acres. The Site is bounded by Cleveland Avenue to the west, Metzger's Ditch to the east, vacant land to the south, and residences to the north.

2.2 Site History

Between 1956 and 1961, the IEL Site was known as the Summit Sand and Gravel Pit and used as an open borrow pit to mine sand and gravel. Sand and gravel mining ceased when the water table was encountered during excavations (Sharp, 2003).

Mr. Charles Kittenger purchased the property in 1966 and initially used the site for fly ash disposal. In September 1966, Mr. Kittenger obtained conditional licenses from the Lake Township Board of Zoning Appeals to operate the site as a landfill from 1966 until 1968; and in 1968, he received additional licenses to allow a variety of solid waste materials to be deposited at the site. The site became known by various names, including Kittenger's Landfill, Kittenger Industrial Landfill, and the Industrial Excess Landfill. Disposal was initially limited to inert materials. In 1968, disposal was expanded to include industrial waste. Liquids were deposited at the landfill between 1968 and 1971. In the early 1970's, municipal, residential and commercial waste disposal occurred. After 1971, hospital wastes and a variety of residential wastes were accepted at the site, including domestic putrescible and septic tank wastes. Two fires in the liquid waste lagoons at the landfill are believed to have resulted in the destruction of a significant quantity of liquids. Following the fires, the landfill was not permitted to receive liquids and was then used for disposal of a variety of solid waste, including household waste and trash.

Coal ash was one of the first wastes disposed of at the site and was placed in topographic depressions to reclaim flooded areas of the site, such as the area in the northwestern portion of the landfill. Ash was also mixed with other wastes and placed throughout the landfill. Liquid wastes are believed to have been disposed into a lagoon located in the north-central portion of the site. A common practice was to mix fly ash with the liquid waste in the lagoon. This process reportedly increased evaporation and inhibited infiltration through the bottom of the lagoon by creating a lower permeability layer of residuum. This procedure was approved by the Ohio Department of Health in 1971. In 1980, pursuant to the requirements of the Stark County Common Pleas Court, the landfill was closed under the requirements of Ohio law with a soil cover.

U.S. EPA and Ohio Environmental Protection Agency (Ohio EPA) concerns with the potential for methane migration from the landfill led to the installation of 13 passive gas vents in 1984. In October 1984, the IEL Site was proposed for the National Priorities List (NPL) in response to concerns of local residents regarding the migration of landfill gas from the site, and possible groundwater contamination. The U.S. EPA initiated a Remedial Investigation / Feasibility Study (RI/FS) and began field work in September 1985. The methane venting system was subsequently installed by the U.S. EPA at the landfill to mitigate any potential methane risks.

A Record of Decision (ROD) was issued in 1987 to provide an alternate water supply to approximately 100 homes located to the west of the landfill. In July 1989, the U.S. EPA issued a "final" ROD for a site remedy. The final ROD for the site was amended and reissued in 2000.

Subsequent to the November 14, 2000, Petition to Change to Remedy for the Industrial Excess Landfill (IEL) Site, Uniontown, Ohio, U.S. EPA conducted a Focused Feasibility Study that supported another ROD amendment. The September 2002 ROD Amendment called for a remedy with the following components:

- Augmenting the existing vegetative cover with selected plantings of trees and other plants at the site;
- Natural attenuation of groundwater contaminants both off-site and on-site;
- Monitoring of groundwater and landfill gas;
- Perimeter fencing;
- Deed restrictions;
- Maintenance of alternate water supply; and
- Additional design studies.

The 2003 Remedial Design Plan for the IEL Site (Sharp, 2003) was approved by U.S. EPA. This sampling event is in accordance with the approved RDP.

3.0 SCOPE OF WORK

LATA conducted the December 2010 sampling event in accordance with the approved RDP, Sampling and Analysis Plan, and Quality Assurance Project Plans used for the post-August 2000 sampling events, as amended to discussions held among LATA, BATO, representatives of Lake Township, Ohio EPA, and U.S. EPA. LATA mobilized to the Site on November 29, 2010, to obtain water level measurements and place all passive samplers. LATA returned to the Site on December 13, 2010, to collect groundwater samplers as well as perform water level gauging at the time of sample collection. Appendix A provides a description of the field sampling methodology used by LATA at the IEL Site.

The long-term monitoring program has been designed and approved with the issuance of the RDP. In accordance with the RDP, this sampling event included the following:

- Collection of groundwater elevation data from IEL monitoring wells which have been used to develop a potentiometric groundwater map at the Site;
- Sampling of wells; and
- Laboratory analysis of all samples for selected parameters according to approved methods.

One well, MW-24i, was unable to be accessed due to a new road covering the well. Therefore, groundwater elevation data and sample collection were unable to be obtained for this sampling event. Well MW-22i was sampled but the sample froze overnight and the vial cracked which released the sample, so no sample was analyzed. Copies of field notes have been provided in Appendix B.

3.1 Groundwater Elevation Monitoring

The depth-to-water and vertical measuring point elevations for the individual well casings are provided in Table 3. As mentioned previously, LATA obtained groundwater elevation data when passive samplers were placed on November 29, 2010, as well as when sample collection occurred on December 13, 2010. Water elevation data collected prior to passive sampler placement were used in creating the potentiometric surface map presented in Figure 3.

3.2 Laboratory Analyses

Groundwater samples collected during this event were submitted to Test America Laboratories, Inc., in North Canton, Ohio for laboratory analyses (Appendix C).

The laboratory samples were analyzed using procedures outlined in the Laboratory Quality Assurance Manual (LQAM) and Laboratory Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs) submitted to U.S. EPA for review prior to the 1998 sampling event. Table 4 provides the requirements for the analytical method and sampling requirements for IEL groundwater samples. The instrument detection limit, the laboratory reporting limit, and the U.S. EPA maximum contaminant level (MCL) for each analyzed constituent is presented in Table 5. Table 6 presents a key for laboratory data qualifiers.

The laboratory provided a CLP-type (Contract Laboratory Program) data package under Test America's standard turnaround time with qualifiers and Tentatively Identified Compounds (TICs) reported, where appropriate. The final data package was received by LATA on January 4, 2011.

4.0 DATA RESULTS

4.1 Groundwater Elevation Data

Table 3 presents groundwater elevation data for the November 2010 sampling event, as well as prior sampling events performed by LATA. The groundwater elevation data were collected on November 29, 2010. These data were used in constructing the potentiometric surface map presented in Figure 3. All of the non-contingency wells listed in Table 2 are considered to be representative of the uppermost continuous groundwater unit as determined in the approved RDP.

The results of the potentiometric surface mapping are consistent with those from previous sampling events. Groundwater flow is from the east to the west at the site, which follows the regional groundwater flow pattern. A "flat spot" over the southern portion of the landfill is revealed, which is also consistent with previous interpretations.

4.2 Organic Compounds

Table 7 lists the results of the VOC analyses. Table 8 presents a summary of VOCs detected in at least one monitoring well for groundwater samples collected in December 2010. The detected VOC concentrations from some recent samples are also presented in Figure 4. For comparison purposes, Table 8 includes the corresponding U.S. EPA MCLs. A by-well compilation of all available sample results for detected constituents is presented in Appendix D.

Constituents detected during this groundwater event include: 1,1-dichloroethane (1,1-DCA), 1,1-dichloroethene (1,1-DCE), 1,2-dichloroethane (1,2-DCA), chlorobenzene, chloroethane, cis-1,2-dichloroethene (cis-1,2-DCE), methylene chloride, toluene, trans-1,2-dichloroethene (trans-1,2-DCE), cyclohexane, styrene, 2-butanone and vinyl chloride. Methylene chloride is a common laboratory contaminant. The only constituents that exceed their respective MCL during the December 2010 event are: 1,2-DCA, cis-1,2-DCE and vinyl chloride.

The trends detected in VOC concentrations in off-site well MW-23s are depicted in Figure 5. The December 2010 sampling event reveals that VOC concentrations continue to remain low in this well; only two constituents were detected and no constituent was detected above the MCL. Cis-1,2-DCE was detected at an apparently anomalously high concentration in August 2007 (16 ug/L), however, the concentration has declined since then, and the current value is 4.6 ug/L. TCE and trans-1,2-DCE were detected in MW-23s for the first time in August 2007, at concentrations of less than 1 ug/L, but were not detected during the last three sampling events.

Figure 6 presents the VOC detections in MW-11i. 1,1-DCA, chloroethane and vinyl chloride are the only constituents that have been consistently detected in this monitoring well since 2000. All constituents are below their respective MCLs. Recent VOC concentrations are relatively stable and remain lower than the historic highs reported from 2000 to 2003.

Figure 7 presents VOC detections in MW-21s since 2000. 1,1-DCA, 1,2-DCA, chloroethane, cis-1,2-DCE, cyclohexane, styrene, toluene and vinyl chloride were detected during the December 2010 event. None of these compounds was detected above its respective MCLs, and concentrations of all of these compounds continue to decrease or remain relatively stable.

Figure 8 presents VOC detections in well MW-29 since its installation in 2004. MW-29 has the highest overall detections of VOCs found in any monitoring well throughout the groundwater monitoring history at the site. 1,1-DCA, 1,1-DCE, 1,2-DCA, chloroethane, cis-1,2-DCE, toluene, and vinyl chloride have consistently been detected at this location. Cis-1,2-DCE, 1,2-DCA and vinyl chloride are above their respective MCLs. The cis-1,2-DCE concentration increased slightly during this event from 69 µg/L (03/09/09) to 84 µg/L (12/13/10). All of the other diluted compounds continue to have relatively stable or decreasing concentrations.

Overall, VOC concentrations detected in monitoring wells are fluctuating within the ranges seen since 2000, as follows:

- Three VOCs are detected in one site well, MW-29, at concentrations greater than their MCLs; 1,2-DCA (19 µg/L, MCL - 5 µg/L), cis-1,2-DCE (84 µg/L, MCL - 70 µg/L), and vinyl chloride (6.1 µg/L, MCL - 2 µg/L). These concentrations are within historical ranges (see Figure 8 and Appendix D).
- Toluene was detected for the first time in several wells at concentrations well below the MCL of 1000 µg/L. Although not listed as such by Test America in the associated data report, toluene can be a common laboratory contaminant.
- All concentrations are within historical ranges (see Appendix D).
- Constituents of cis-1,2-DCE and 1,1-DCA detected in MW-23s have increased slightly since the previous event (March 2009) but remain below their respective MCLs. Figure 5 presents these results over time.
- Methylene chloride, a common laboratory contaminant, was detected in one monitoring well at a concentration of 0.58 µg/L, which is below the MCL of 5 µg/L.

4.3 Target Analyte Metals

Samples for metal analytes were not collected during the December 2010 event. Metals are not scheduled to be sampled until the May 2011 event, as stated in the approved RDP.

4.4 Other Results

4.4.1 Field Analytical Parameters

No field analytical parameters were obtained during the December 2010 groundwater sampling event since all samples were collected using passive samplers. Field analytical parameters taken throughout previous investigations using non-passive techniques include pH, conductivity, dissolved oxygen, oxidation-reduction potential, turbidity and temperature.

4.4.2 TICs

The Tentatively Identified Compounds (TICs) reported for the December 2010 samples are listed in Table 9. TICs are not identified in Table 8. The only TICs identified for the December 2010 event are ethyl ether, ethylhydrazine, and trimethylsilanol. Ethylhydrazine and trimethylsilanol received an “NJ” qualifier which indicates the presence of an analyte that has been “tentatively identified” and the associated numerical value represents an approximate concentration. The concentration of ethyl ether was calculated based on the calculated value of an associated internal standard.

TICs are not target compounds; as such, a standard is not used to calibrate the laboratory instrumentation for identification or quantitation. Should an unidentified peak appear on the chromatogram, its associated spectrum is compared to a library of spectra and if it is found to match a compound within 90% or more of the reference spectrum, it is tentatively identified as that compound.

4.4.3 Blank Analyses

There were no VOCs detected in the VOC trip blank (see Table 10). 1,2,4-Trichlorobenzene (1,2,4-TCB) was detected in one VOC method blank. 1,2,4-TCB and methylene chloride were also detected in a second laboratory method blank. Samples associated with each method blank were reviewed and qualified as needed. According to U.S. EPA functional guidelines, methylene chloride is a common laboratory contaminant. The methylene chloride detected in groundwater sample MW-03i was associated to a method blank that did not contain methylene chloride.

4.4.4 Duplicate Analyses

Duplicate samples were collected from monitoring wells MW-11i and MW-29 (see Table 11). There is good agreement generally between the results of the sample and field replicate analyses. The relative percent difference between MW-29 concentrations of trans-1,2-DCE exceeded the 20% control limit. However, results should be considered within agreement between the two when the reporting limit for the non-detection (in this case the duplicate sample) exceeds the detected concentration (in this case the parent sample). The data reviewer did not qualify any data based on the results of the duplicate comparisons.

5.0 DISCUSSION

Results of this sampling event are similar to those obtained in the sampling conducted since August 2000, as follows:

5.1 Groundwater Flow

- The groundwater flow patterns are consistent with those historically noted at the site; and

- The groundwater potentiometric surface for the uppermost glacial continuous groundwater unit exhibits an east-to-west flow that is consistent with the regional east-to-west flow.

5.2 Analytical Results

- The types and concentrations of detected VOC constituents are similar to those from previous events (except for cyclohexane and styrene which were detected at concentrations estimated below the laboratory reporting limit).
- Only three constituents (1,2-DCA, cis-1,2-DCE, and vinyl chloride) are present in one monitoring well at levels that exceed their respective MCLs. The concentrations of these constituents are typically within an order of magnitude of the respective MCLs and generally appear to be declining.
- Cis-1,2-DCE detected in wells MW-23s and MW-29 have increased since the previous event (March 2009).

5.3 Natural Attenuation and Source Decay

As a closed landfill matures, its releases into the atmosphere and groundwater generally decline as the fixed amount of starting material (waste) dissipates, resulting in slower release rates of degraded and undegraded materials into the surrounding environment. The dissipation of the starting material (source decay) typically occurs over several decades. Additionally, released materials are subject to further degradation and other mechanisms (collectively referred to as natural attenuation) that can transform them or limit their migration in the environment. The activity of such natural attenuation mechanisms in the ongoing maturation of the IEL site has been documented in the public record since 1997.

This groundwater monitoring event continues to demonstrate that natural attenuation and source decay are limiting the migration of contaminants away from the waste mass. Chlorinated solvent degradation products, such as cis-1,2-DCE, 1,2-DCA, chloroethane, and vinyl chloride are more common in the groundwater than are the parent compounds that were originally disposed in the landfill (tetrachloroethene, trichloroethene, and 1,1,1-trichloroethane). The presence of degradation products in groundwater samples in the absence of parent compounds is direct evidence that reductive dechlorination, a natural attenuation mechanism, is degrading the parent compounds. Further, the groundwater beneath the site is anoxic which provides a reducing environment where reductive dechlorination processes are facilitated. See Figure 6 of Summary Report on the May 2006 Groundwater Sampling Event at the Industrial Excess Landfill (IEL) Site, Uniontown, Ohio, LATA, August 2006.

Beyond the reducing zone, aerobic conditions redevelop due to various processes, including mixing with ambient groundwater, reaction with oxidized compounds naturally present in the formation, infiltration of aerated precipitation, and diffusion of oxygen through the vadose zone. Reductive dechlorination products that migrate into this aerobic zone may be destroyed via aerobic biodegradation mechanisms and/or abiotic mechanisms. Hydrocarbons such as benzene and toluene are rapidly biodegraded if they reach an aerobic zone. These natural degradation processes explain why no hazardous constituents are being detected above MCLs at significant distances downgradient of the landfill.

Currently MW-29 has the highest concentrations of constituents and three constituents that are above their respective MCL. As Figure 8 illustrates, overall MW-29 has stable to declining concentrations of VOC constituents at the IEL site (slight increase in cis-1,2-DCE over the current reporting period).

Based on the recent groundwater monitoring events, source decay continues and conditions remain favorable for natural attenuation. These processes are effective in preventing the off-site migration of contaminants at concentrations above their respective MCLs.

* = Dedicated well pumps were removed and passive samplers installed 8-2007.

** = No sample was collected. Well was unable to be located due to new stone road installation over the well casing.

*** = MW-22i was sampled. The sample froze and the vials cracked in the field following sample collection, so no sample was available for analysis.

Tier Summary
Tier Designation	Well Description	Monitoring Purpose / Approach
Sentinel Wells: 8 wells: 1s, 1i, 7i, 21s, 11s, 11i, 29, 31	Located along western boundary of landfill	Will detect migration downgradient from landfill if it occurs
On-Site Wells: 2 wells: 13i and 14i	Double-cased new wells installed through waste	Provide early indications of migration from landfill contents
Background: 2 wells: 12i, 30	Upgradient	Identify regional changes; monitor naturally-occurring constituents
Perimeter Wells: 7 Wells: 3i, 18i, 18s, 22i, 16, 17, 23s	Along landfill perimeter but cross-gradient	Provide coverage of uppermost aquifer in all compass directions
Downgradient Wells: 5 24i, 25s, 26s, 27i, 10i	Further downgradient than sentinel wells	Allow measurement of extent should sentinel wells show detects
Contingency Wells: 6 9i, 1d, 20s, 11d, 21i, 7d	Western/southern boundary wells retained	Sampled only if results in 1i, 11i, 21s, 7i, and 30 warrant
New Wells: 5 16, 17, 29, 30, 31	Replacement: 16, 17 Background: 30 Sentinel 29, 31	Northside boundary coverage Better Sentinel well coverage Better background location

Appendix A. Field Sampling Methodology

Field Sampling Methodology

The approved Sampling and Analysis Plan was generated by updating the previously approved Earth Sciences Consultants, Inc., plan (dated November 22, 1998) as described below.

The USEPA-approved Sampling and Analysis Plan was updated to incorporate the results of discussions among the Responding Companies and U.S. EPA held on May 18, 2000, as confirmed by a letter dated May 31, 2000. The May 31, 2000, letter identified the goals of the performance-monitoring program as:

- Evaluate groundwater quality trends;
- Verify groundwater flow direction;
- Verify the continued performance of the monitored natural attenuation remedy;
- Establish long-term performance criteria; and
- Design the long-term monitoring program that meets the goals of the performance criteria.

The long-term monitoring program has been designed and approved with the issuance of the RDP. In accordance with the RDP, this sampling event included the following:

- Collection of groundwater elevation data from all IEL monitoring wells (these data were used to develop a potentiometric map for groundwater at the Site);
- Sampling of all wells scheduled for sampling;
- Field analysis for selected parameters using field instruments and a flow-through cell; and
- Laboratory analysis of all samples for selected parameters according to approved methods.

Fieldwork / Sampling

The groundwater sampling event was conducted on March 9, 2009. Sampling was conducted in accordance with the reviewed Health and Safety Plan for the Site.

For the March 2009 sampling event, passive samplers were installed in all 23 of the wells on February 19, 2009; MW-12i could not be located since it was covered by ice. Passive samplers were field-tested in August 2004 and their obtained analytical results were compared to those collected using standard low-flow sampling in the August 2004 report.

The 23 passive samplers were removed from the wells on March 9; 2009 once removed, the membrane was pierced with a dedicated straw and the contents of the sampler was used to fill Volatile Organic Analyte (VOA) vials. VOC samples collected, and sent to Test America on March 10, 2009.

Instrument Calibration

All instruments were calibrated at a frequency greater than the respective manufacturer's recommendation. Appendix D contains the field notebook pages that contain the instrument calibration information.

Passive Sampling Methodology

The U.S. Geological Survey developed passive (no purge) samplers as another low-cost method of collecting groundwater samples from wells without disturbing the water column in a sampled well. Passive diffusion samplers work on the principle of diffusion – chemical compounds that are dissolved in water move from areas of high concentration outside the sampler to initially low concentration inside the sampler until equilibration is reached. These samplers have been proven to be an effective tool for collecting water samples from wells containing VOCs because these compounds can diffuse through the membrane into the water in the sampler. (Vroblesky, 2001)

Each sampler used for a sampling event consisted of a polyethylene bag filled with deionized water that was contained in a sieve mesh. Each bag was suspended in the well at the nominal center of the screened interval using a weighted line.

On March 9, 2009, groundwater samples were collected from 23 monitoring wells that had been equipped with passive samplers on February 19, 2009. From each passive sampler, three, HCl-preserved 40 ml sample bottles (VOAs) were collected by rupturing the sampler's collection membrane with a dedicated, disposable shunt.

Passive diffusion sampler being removed from well MW-11i in February 2005.
